

GREG WILLIAMS RETURNS TO AGA

AGA welcomes Greg Williams back to the team and to his new role as Field Merchant for the Wagga Office. Greg has made the move back to AGA after time spent working on the Cargill trading desk in Melbourne in positions as a Protein Meal Trader and then later as the Cargill Sorghum Trader. Desiring a move back to the country, Greg made the decision to come back to AGA to work as a Field Merchant in a rural capacity which he maintains provides an important balance of enjoying a country lifestyle and supporting his passion for the Grains Marketing Industry.

“AGA is a really great company to work for, with many daily challenges and there is always a new development project to be involved with. I find it rewarding to be involved with such a progressive company and being able to provide a professional service to local growers is also very satisfying.”

Greg is also excited about the opportunity to move back to his home town of Wagga Wagga, an area he grew up in and still enjoys. He brings to the Wagga region a wealth of experience in the grain industry with previous roles in GrainCo and GrainCorp as well as AGA Field Merchant roles across various regions in New South Wales.

“Working as a field merchant in the MIA during seasons of high production, running buying programs for soft wheat, grit maize, delivered end user and sole buyer sites and then also working in trading during the exciting time of deregulation of bulk wheat exports have all been highlights.”

“It has also been good seeing AGA develop systems and processes to be at the leading edge of grain accumulation during this time.”
